

The number of people who respond positively to change strategy affects business productivity and efficiency. Therefore, we need “intercultural” awareness to help develop “intercultural” and “cross-cultural” strategies for business.

However, the authors of the first two papers also point out that not all intercultural people (the authors of Multicultural and Cross-cultural) always group together with only those who accept the business business plan, who understand the business and its culture, and who are the majority. However, this study shows that only a small number of people support the business plan. Therefore, we need further research (Bakker et al., 2016).

2.2.2. Cultural-Making Model

There are three main points that we can see from the Cultural-Making Model (culture, integration, business). The first point is that the model is not only a business model but also a cultural model. The second point is that the model is not only a business model but also a cultural model. The third point is that the model is not only a business model but also a cultural model.

As you work to make changes, take the time to give others a heads-up. They, too, will benefit from recognizing the good. As you work to make changes, others may find it easier to give advice through the appropriate channels, such as the two methods specified. The culture will continue to improve. Be sure that you share positive change from the good you find every day.

Remember that your success, "You are what you surround yourself with" (see this link), p. 10. The language of success is to be making positive change people purple and brown, encouraging the positive change and making positive change with others green, yellow, and pink.

The Simple Making Model

NOTE: The culture of success is to be making positive change people purple and brown, encouraging the positive change and making positive change with others green, yellow, and pink. The culture of success is to be making positive change people purple and brown, encouraging the positive change and making positive change with others green, yellow, and pink.